

From Support Analyst to Delivery Leader Priya's Growth Journey at Optimos India

When Priya Sharma joined Optimos India six years ago as a Support Analyst, she was excited about the opportunities ahead but unsure of where her career would ultimately lead.

Fresh into the technology services industry, Priya spent her early days at Optimos India, supporting client operations, resolving issues, and learning the fundamentals of project delivery. While the work was challenging, she quickly realized that Optimos offered something beyond a job - a place where people were encouraged to learn, experiment, and grow.

"I remember being given responsibilities that were slightly beyond my comfort zone," Priya recalls. "At first it felt intimidating, but my managers trusted me and encouraged me to take ownership. That confidence helped me grow much faster than I expected."

Over the years, Priya embraced every opportunity that came her way. She completed multiple certifications in cloud technologies and project management, volunteered for cross-functional initiatives, and actively participated in leadership development programs offered by the company.

Her dedication soon began to pay off. What started as a role focused on operational support gradually evolved into responsibilities involving client engagement, project coordination, and team leadership. Today, Priya leads a team of more than 30 professionals, managing strategic client programs across multiple geographies.

One of the defining moments in her journey came during a large-scale digital transformation project for a global client. Faced with tight timelines and complex stakeholder requirements, Priya stepped forward to coordinate teams across technology, operations, and consulting functions.

“The experience taught me the importance of collaboration,” she says. “No major success is achieved alone. It takes people coming together with a shared purpose.”

The project was successfully delivered ahead of schedule and received recognition from both the client and company leadership. More importantly, it reinforced Priya’s belief that continuous learning and teamwork are powerful drivers of success.

According to Priya, one of the biggest reasons she has stayed with Optimos India is the culture. “People genuinely want to see each other succeed here. Leaders are approachable, feedback is encouraged, and there is a strong focus on helping employees build meaningful careers.”

Today, as a Delivery Leader, Priya is committed to supporting the next generation of talent. She actively mentors young professionals and regularly shares her experiences with new hires. “Someone invested time in helping me grow when I first joined. I see mentoring as an opportunity to give back and help others discover their potential.”

For Optimos India, Priya’s story reflects what is possible when talent, opportunity, and determination come together. Her journey is a testament to the company’s commitment to nurturing careers, developing future leaders, and creating an environment where employees can thrive.

As Optimos India continues its growth journey, stories like Priya’s serve as a reminder that the company’s greatest strength lies in its people—and in the opportunities they create for one another every day.